Suman is an adolescent girl, who has a dream to become a teacher and teach girls like her, she is beautiful, shy and the focused girl lives with four siblings and parents in urban slums of Agra. Her family's monthly income is Approx. Rs. 2,500 per month which barely satisfy their necessities. Moreover, to bear the educational expenses of their children was a tough task for her parents. These financial dilemmas started throwing a dark shadow on the future of their children which led to the school dropout of their only son. The same was about to happen with Suman after she has completed her fifth class at a government primary school. However, luck favours Suman because Indian Dreams Foundation has spotted her for their girls' education sponsoring and mentoring program called "Honhar Ladki Program". Since, the year 2011, Suman is a part of "Honhar Ladki Program", and now she is regarded as an ambassador and respected as a role model among her peer groups and in her communities.

Now, she is in class 12th and waiting for college next year; her eyes glitter with her dreams of becoming teacher will turn into reality very soon.
