Jaya is one of the shining stars of the Honhar Ladki Program. Her father, a labourer, was an alcoholic and had his health deteriorate over time. Her mother faced harassment and physical abuse at the hands of her husband and had been living separately with her children for the past five years.

Her mother is a housemaid. She has never asked her children to work and encourages them to study as long as they can. Jaya was studied at home by her mother till class VI, after which her mother approached the IDF for enrollment in a school, as she had realised the importance of formal education. After multiple rounds of evaluation, she was selected for the program and joined class VII in C.P. Public School. However, the sudden death of her father in recent months created many troubles to Jaya's mother; her family has now shifted in the other place with her relatives.

IDF has enrolled her in the school which is located in her new locality. She enjoys in her new school with her new friends. Jaya takes pride to share that she is the most educated member of her large family. Jaya's younger brother and sister got inspiration from her, and now they are also regular in school and performing well in their respective classes. She teaches her young siblings in the evening and motivates them and other children for the value of education.
